

Elena Shevchenko

Doctor of Political Sciences, Associate Professor at the Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv.

At various times, Elena Shevchenko studied at the Faculty of Economics of the Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv, and later at the Faculty of Journalism. In 2003 she defended her dissertation on the topic: "PR as a Factor of Political Culture in International Relations." In the following years, she won the competition of young scientists of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences for the monograph PR in International Relations: European Experience and Perspectives of Ukraine.

Since 2002, she worked first as a lecturer, then as an assistant professor, and is currently an associate professor at the Institute of International Relations at Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv.

Elena Shevchenko's research interests include international public relations, international media communications, global climate change communication, and corporate social responsibility.

Elena Shevchenko is the author and co-author of more than 150 scientific and educational publications on international communication, public relations, modern communication technologies and global challenges.